

Am Anfang war Duke Ellington. Mood Indigo. Dieser Sound mit gedämpfter Trompete, Posaune, tiefer Klarinette. Und Groove.

Lead-Synthesizer, Posaune, Klarinette, Gitarre, Schlagzeug ist Project T, eine sehr persönliche Auseinandersetzung mit historischen Kompositionen des Great American Songbook von Ellington, Goodman, Mancini und Porter.

Im Jahr 2007 haben sich meine drei Klarinetten-Kollegen Peter Kunsek, Klaus Gesing, Gerald Preinfalk und ich bei Project M bereits mit der Musik von Thelonious Monk und parametrischer Improvisation beschäftigt. Auf Project T wurden nun – als zweite Tranche einer 'Serie in progress' – mir liebgewordene alte Stücke, in einem aktuellen musikalischen Umfeld neu ausgelotet und realisiert, und weiteren interessanten Forschungen auf dem Gebiet der improvisierten Elektroakustik gegenübergestellt.

"... we might have melody,
and have rhythm,
and do our thing."

T 4 2

Tradition has it that it was in 1214 that Eisai wrote his Kissa Yōjōki. Thereafter, up until the end of the Kamakura era, priests especially, as well as many warriors and aristocrats, enjoyed drinking tea. Eisai returned to Japan from his second sojourn in China in 1191 carrying tea seeds, which he then planted at Seburiyama in Hizen province. This was called Ishigami tea. The traditional account continues that Eisai presented some of his tea seeds to Saint Myōe at Toganoo in Kyoto and that they were in a persimmon-shaped tea container, which had been brought over from China. Myōe planted his seeds there and they flourished, eventually spreading to other areas.

One can surmise the contemporary view of tea from the Isei Teikin Ōrai, which said, «In our country tea comes originally from Toganoo. For the founder of the temple there, the devil of sleep was an obstacle to Zen practice, so as a means to overcome it, he planted tea to be a food for the concentration of the mind.» This then was the initial reason for the cultivation of tea. The postscript on a copy of a sutra dated 1321 and preserved in the well-known medieval library the Kanazawa Bunko asserted, «After seven cups of tea I have conquered the devil of sleep and burned nine wicks in my lamp to accomplish the copying [of this sutra].»

Thus, as late as the end of the Kamakura era, for priests, tea was nothing more than a means «to conquer the devil of sleep.»

Mood Indigo

While Blue is the color of communication with others, Indigo turns the Blue inward,
to increase personal thought, profound insights,
and instant understandings.

Indigo is the colour of the 6th chakra,
the Ajna Chakra, the «Third Eye».
Whereas Blue is the colour of transition — «the door to the other side» —
Indigo, is "the other side".

Indigo is the colour of synthesis.
This translates through the human consciousness as «knowing» — but not knowing how you know.
